COURSE DESCRIPTION

The conference is intended for dermatologists, although primary care physicians with a special interest in dermatology are welcome to attend. The course is designed to provide high-level continuing education for dermatologists, keeping them abreast of new and exciting findings in basic science, clinical dermatology and dermatologic therapy. We are fortunate this year to have an outstanding group of lecturers speaking on a wide range of clinical applications.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES

1. Recognize and learn to use the multiple new topical and systemic agents available for the treatment of cutaneous diseases including acne rosacea, psoriasis, atopic dermatitis, acne vulgaris, and other disorders.
2. Update your knowledge of new diagnoses in dermatology and their management.
3. Improve your photodynamic therapy protocol.
4. Sharpen your ability with subcutaneous filler agents.
5. Recognize and effectively evaluate dermatologic mosaicism with specific implications on pregnancy and genetics.
6. Evaluate and manage patients with systemic autoimmune disease who have cutaneous manifestations.
7. Refine your surgical technique. Build on what you learned last year.
